

I am writing in response to Ofcom's consultation on its review of regional TV production and programming guidance.

I am a professional English actor with Equity membership living in Scotland

As an actor, I have watched with dismay, especially in the light of massive investment in the TV/film making industry in Scotland, productions continuing to cast major and minor roles in TV and films principally within the London region, presumably for their own convenience, despite the majority of the film or production being filmed on location in Scotland. Ignoring the availability not only of actors but also their agents and casting directors.

The majority of crew appear to be recruited within the Central Scotland belt, so why not the actors?

I am therefore disappointed that on-screen talent is excluded from the criteria for a production to qualify as regional (which includes those badged as produced in one of the UK's nations) and am writing to urge Ofcom to include opportunities for on-screen talent in its revised guidance and explanatory notes for public service broadcasters on regional TV production.

While Ofcom recognises on-screen talent as an important part of the production industry and the benefits of local casting initiatives, it is disappointing that the only reference in the amended guidance to on-screen talent is that it's exempt from the criteria.

A huge diversity of performing talent resides in the regions, and local castings and auditions give performers in the regions an opportunity to be seen and considered for work near where they live. It also opens up employment opportunities to a broader and more diverse range of talent, including those with caring and parental responsibilities.

The purpose of this regulatory structure is to strengthen regional production centres and creative and cultural economies across the UK, including helping to disperse job opportunities in the sector; actors and performers are a key part of their regional creative economies and are a significant factor in the success of productions.

I urge you to include opportunities for on-screen talent in the guidance and explanatory notes on regional production, and look forward to your response to this consultation.

Yours sincerely,

John Webster

Professional Actor
Equity member