I understand that Ofcom is planning to recommend a reductions in the quotas for drama and comedy on Radio 4.

As a regular listener to Radio 4 (and occasionally Radio 3) I strongly object to such reductions in quotas. Much of the delights of Radio 4 are the chance of hearing good drama and comedy, supplementing the rest of the content of news, documentaries and talks. I cannot see any need to tamper with the balance of items on the network, which I am sure would reduce the variety of the programming and make it much less interesting and amusing.
