

R Murchie
Individual response

I use BBC Sounds myself to listen to music mainly from Radio 3 and find it very useful.

My concerns are with the dominance of the BBC in news and current affairs, broadcast and online, supported by BBC Sounds. It is fairly widely accepted, following Brexit, that the BBC is no longer impartial, contrary to its charter, and takes the liberal, elitist, metropolitan line. During the so-called covid crisis it has become a mouthpiece for government and has contributed to the financial and cultural ruination of the country.

It has been instrumental in destroying the local press, and lurches from one scandal to another, being out of touch with ordinary British people and values.

I believe the BBC should be cut back to its core purposes set out in its charter, with a limited web site and stripped back radio app.