

I fail to understand how BBC Sounds doesn't impact, or has limited impact, on the activities of the companies & organisations which are not subsidised by the licence fee payer. Perhaps BBC Sounds should become a "must carry" service providing a conduit for the best of community radio, or other not for profit programming, so that it becomes available to a wider audience. This would help to rebalance the dominant market position brought about through subsidy.

North Cotswold Community Radio