

Yes. Chorley Borough is a fairly small community that relies heavily on partnership working amongst voluntary organisations and statutory bodies alike, to offer the best possible service to members of this community, in particular those who are deemed to be vulnerable or at risk. Chorley fm enables communication of these services to the whole community, giving organisations such as Help Direct the opportunity to communicate any current issues or initiatives and to highlight ways in which we can support members of the public and other organisations, by connecting them with the support and services that meet their needs. We undertake a specific time slot once a month, which enables us to plan ahead to ensure key points are addressed during this time slot, which is invaluable to our service.
