

No

I am unimpressed by the station's decision to change its key commitments – it appears to be as station run by directors who don't know what they doing. With experience in radio and having read the problems faced by Chorley FM, I have offered my services to the station on several occasions, only to be told that there were no available positions.

Their flagship breakfast show is voice tracked, but the quality of the tracking programs is awful. The schedule is filled with repeats, some of which aren't suitable for daytime listening. Local news has virtually disappeared and the odd events guide is often out of date.