

I understand that you are the person to respond to concerning the above consultation.

I don't find the idea of my post being delivered to a neighbour at all acceptable.

I expect my mail to be delivered to my address, and understand that if that is impossible, then I can go to the sorting office to collect it if I can't be at home for a redelivery.

Other deliverers of packages have a much more slapdash approach to correct deliveries, and I have often lost items like that. I expect, where Royal Mail is concerned, to have them do the job properly.

If such a system were to be introduced, then it needs to be on an "opt in" basis, and must NOT be on an "opt out" basis.

Many thanks
