

Question 1:Do you agree that Ofcom should grant approval to Royal Mail for the Delivery to Neighbour service? If not please explain your answer. :

Approval should not be granted at present as the proposal is fundamentally flawed in its present format. In principle the idea of leaving items with a neighbour is acceptable, other delivery companies do it already.

However a householder having to display a sticker on their door stating what their preference is, is totally unacceptable.

Does no one think of the potential security risks never mind advising all callers to your door including your neighbours that you do not want your delivery left with them or are you willing to take a item for them.

There are other ways Royal Mail can keep this information without a householder advertising it on their front door

Think again

Question 2:Are there other consequences following the roll out of the service across the UK that we have not included in our assessment? If so, please explain.:

Question 3:Do you have any comments on the scope and wording of the proposed Notification and approval:
