

Question 1:Do you agree that Ofcom should grant approval to Royal Mail for the Delivery to Neighbour service? If not please explain your answer. :

No I certainly do not agree

An absolutely ridiculous idea, unless your living in an upper class gates community which most of us are not how many people do not trust their neighbours or even if some of them are trust worthy how will the post office know which ones you are happy to have a parcel left with, additionally it means we the consumer, the customer are acting like a mini post office, does this therefore means prices in regards to post will reduce, I think probably not. Lastly I want my personal preferences kept private, I do not wish to have a bloody great sticker on my front door announcing to the whole bloody street that I do not want to hold their parcels and that I certainly do not want them looking after mine. If there are neighbour disputes going on isn't this just going to inflame the whole dam situation. I just get more and more disillusion not only with "consumer" companies but with bloody regulators who supposedly act on behalf of the "consumer" Well Done Ofcom you've helped the wrong party, whoop whoop

Question 2:Are there other consequences following the roll out of the service across the UK that we have not included in our assessment? If so, please explain.:

Question 3:Do you have any comments on the scope and wording of the proposed Notification and approval:

No

the sticker idea is so chavy
