

Question 1:Do you agree that Ofcom should grant approval to Royal Mail for the Delivery to Neighbour service? If not please explain your answer. :

No ofcom should not grant approval.

This should be an opt in scheme not an opt out scheme. Why should those that don't want it be inconvenienced by having to display a sticker.

Have ofcom considered the precedent setting situation whereby more companies will request to do the same?

Question 2:Are there other consequences following the roll out of the service across the UK that we have not included in our assessment? If so, please explain.:

I do not believe that full consideration has been given to the elderly who may not want to open the door to strangers and this flies in the face of encouraging them to do so. How are Royal mail really get the message across to them they have to opt out--some get confused, some have mobility problems and it is a great effort for them to get to the door--again it should be opt in not opt out to avoid these scenarios

Question 3:Do you have any comments on the scope and wording of the proposed Notification and approval:

The notification makes no provision for blind people at all and discriminates against them
