

Question 1:Do you agree that Ofcom should grant approval to Royal Mail for the Delivery to Neighbour service? If not please explain your answer. :

No, the purpose of mail delivery is to get the package or letter delivered directly to the person. If the package or letter is delivered to anyone then my privacy and property are handled by strangers. Second who defines a neighbor? Just because someone lives in the house next to mine that does not mean that I trust that person. If the issues was that one can add a chosen neighbor as trustee then each person would be able to make that decision at their own risk. What will happen is that the Royal Mail will soon be creating more expensive delivery options to those who do not wish to have their mail delivered to anyone. Plus, which documents proof that the person next door receiving the mail does live there and is who he or she claim to be. It is appalling that Royal Mail is even considering this. The Royal Mail ought to wake up and realize that a big city like London ain't comparable to a little village in the country, and even then, privacy is privacy.

Question 2:Are there other consequences following the roll out of the service across the UK that we have not included in our assessment? If so, please explain.:

This jeopardizes individual privacy and put people at greater risk of fraud and identity theft.

Question 3:Do you have any comments on the scope and wording of the proposed Notification and approval:

Fine Royal Mail for even considering this. As if it wasn't enough that government official where loosing people private information.
