

Madam I am sure this is another scheme to save money and shift the responsibility from Royal Mail to it appears to anyone else. Royal Mail has a responsibility to deliver the post That is what all this is about In this day and age, sometimes you do not know who the person is next door,Especially down here in Cornwall.People are in and out all the time. Not everybody is sadly" Honest"Hence the risk, We here in penzance have an idea ,I f the post is put in the wrong letterbox, to deliver it by hand to the right address. But, anywhere else it might not be the case. We have had problems here with Parcels, not been delivered to the correct address,because they were out, ,left at a neighbours, by the post person In good faith. They not been in,when the person calls for their parcel. and finally getting the parcel 3/5 days later The system at the moment works perfectly well So why change it? The next thing to happen with the Royal mail will be to collect our post at a central point ,This will save the Royal Mail employing Post people. More savings.!!! Somehow we seem to be going backwards with all these ideas to save money.Not properly thought out,as to all the implications. Perhaps, if the Bosses at the Royal Mail were to take the place of the ordinary Post person. and witnessed it at the "sharp end" they would understand more. Sorry for getting it off my chest and probally boring you But it concerns us all These so called "New Ideas"on saving money Yours faithfully Martin Smith