Dear Jeremy,

Thank you for your letter of June 18th 2012, about Ofcom's advice on measuring media plurality.

As you know, we have also made the report available to Lord Justice Leveson, and it was published on our website yesterday morning.

The additional areas and questions set out in your letter touch on important aspects of how any new plurality regime might work in practice. We will aim to provide responses to the questions by the end of September, as you have asked, and we also look forward to participating in the seminar planned for October.

We will of course liaise with your officials as necessary during the course of our work over the next few months.

Yours ever,
Colette
