What do you want Ofcom to keep confidential?

Keep name confidential

Question 1: Are there any reasonable grounds why Ofcom should not grant the request to vary the five Wireless Telegraphy Third Generation Mobile Licences by increasing the permitted maximum in-band EIRP to 68dBm as soon as practicable? If so, please explain your reasoning for this:

YES! BECAUSE THE UK IS ALONE IN IGNORING EU HEALTH AND ENVIRONMENTAL CONCERNS..!

WHY IS THIS ??? are we not supposed to be part of the EU ? It seems sometimes we are and sometimes not - of course the EU does not always get things right - as evidenced by their wish to re-start GM crops....BUT

The European Environment Agency are taking the constant new research evidence seriously for mast radiation levels and are calling for exposure to be reduced - much evidence -is cited over 2000 reports are gathered - in the BIOINITATIVE REPORT. www.bioinitiative.org

If the EU is concerned for the welfare of member nations why isn't the UK willing to be concerned for its citizens ?

we all know that there is no research to prove masts and electro-magnetic pollution as SAFE - so why continue to ignore the precautionary principle..?!

does OFCOM relish lawsuits in the future - when the dangerous levels it suggested and then gave permission for - are linked to serious health issues the length and breadth of Britain ? just as now the tobacco industry is now seen as toxic - its only a matter of time before the research on microwave radiation is proved beyond a doubt and mast radiation will be seen as contributory to various health conditions and will OFCOM then take responsibility for playing with the nations health ??

you can keep quoting the government 'guidelines' etc that take no account of anything reported in the Bioinitiative report - but you can't stop the ultimate consequences you will personally be responsible for - if this goes ahead.

what goes around comes around - never a truer saying - with invisible toxins like microwave mobile mast pollution...

Question 2: Are there any reasonable grounds why Ofcom should not also apply the increased permitted maximum in-band EIRP to future 2 GHz MSS/CGC licences? If so, please explain your reasoning for this:

the same reasons above. Untill the UK government ACTUALLY LISTENS TO OTHER EU COUNTRIES AND RESEARCHERS we are in the unenviable position of being alone in our high level masts and therefore in the UK are potentially like guinea pigs for all the global multi-national mobile phone companies.

I hope at least the individuals who run the mobile phone industry know about the UK government advice that no child under 16 should have a mobile phone - (because of the precautionary principle and children having thinner skulls to protect their brains from microwave 'warming'.) and that they at least are willing to protect their own children - if not willing or interested to protect the children of the UK.

Everyone and everything is at risk by increasing mast levels. Not only children and people who already have health conditions - but most alarmingly - for our long-term survival there is increasing evidence that our bee population is being decimated by mobile mast emissions.

If the bees become dangerously low and are not there to pollinate crops and other plant stuff - how does OFCOM propose that we survive as a nation ??

import all of us food stuffs ?

well...if masts continue to increase the hertz level and continue to interfere with the Schuman pulse - to which our health and the health of every living thing is connected to and depends on - there's not going to be a bee left anywhere to pollinate anything...

anyway, I have no doubt that although OFCOM staff will have children of their own and therefore a duty to them - if not to the mobile phone industry - to consider the body of growing evidence from the EU Environment agency - and the Bioinitiative report - which contradicts everything our UK government states is 'safe' with 'increased permitted in-band'. Let's hope that OFCOM staff do worry about the future, their children and from that perspective everyone else in the UK who will also be affected by THEIR monumental decisions.

..that by the way have no media exposure at all.....

but why would anyone in the media be worried about the health of the nation and bees when we are also bogged down by wars, bankers out of control, and potential flooding.
