Additional comments:

Question 1: Do you agree that copy management would broaden the range of HD content available on DTT and help secure its long term viability as a platform? :

no. i believe it will slow the uptake of HD TV if there are limits on what people can do with recordings.

We pay a license fee, there should be no limits on publicly funded broadcasts by the BBC.

Question 2: Do you agree that the BBC's proposed multiplex licence amendment represents the most appropriate means for securing an effective content management system on HD DTT? :

no. the system can easily be broken, even the BBC have admitted this.

Question 3: Do you agree with the proposed change to Condition 6 in the Multiplex B Licence? :

no

Question 4: Do you agree that Multiplexes C and D should be granted a similar amendment to their Licences as Multiplex B?. :

no

Question 5: Do you agree that the BBC's proposed approach for implementing content management would safeguard citizens and consumers legitimate use of HD content, and if not, what additional guarantees would be appropriate? :

as the mechanism is flawed and can be overcome, no.

No control is required. The DLTA was defeated in the USA before it came to the UK, such draconian measures are ridiculous.

TV License Fee payers and publicly funded television should not be subject to the whims of a non-elected corporate 'multinational' who are only there to line their own pockets.

Question 6: Do you agree that the BBC's proposed choice of content management technologies will have only a negligible impact on the cost of HD DTT receivers and their interoperability with other HD consumer equipment? . :

no. this will mean that content from outside the UK will not work in the UK. And people who already have HDTV equipment would be required to buy new equipment.

Question 7: Do stakeholders agree that the BBC's proposed Huffman Code licensing arrangements would have a negligible effect on the market for HD DTT receivers? :

no, see answer to question 6. As already stated the mechanism they are proposing can be easily broken by those in the know, so it will only penalise law-abiding citizens while the pirates will get around it.

Question 8: Do the BBC's proposed content management states and their permitted use for different categories of HD content meet the requirements of other HD broadcasters on DTT? . :

Question 9: Are there any issues that you consider Ofcom should take into account in assessing the BBC's proposal, that have not been addressed by this consultation?:
