

From: Andrew Fogg
Sent: 29 August 2008
To: Mobile
Subject: mobile comms consultation

Sir

The only point I really want to make is very brief:

If you want to sort out mobile coverage in the UK at a stroke and at nearly no cost, oblige the UK operators to set up roaming agreements between each other.

I wouldn't mind paying a penny or two extra per minute while I'm not on my home network, if at least I could make the call. If I go to Germany, for instance, my (Vodafone) mobile hops around happily between all of the German networks and I get seamless coverage. That should be the case here at home too.

yours
Andrew Fogg